

Land of the Hoosier Dawn (An Event From the Hoosier Dawn Book 1)

For police chief Linton Derr, living in Fogstow, Indiana was ideal. There was little to no crime. Everybody knew everyone else's name. But all it took was one big tragedy to put things into perspective. An ominous fog cloud from the nation's most polluted river rolled over his small Indiana town one Friday night in October of 1993. For those who were caught in its path, a new day had dawned onto what they had become. Their bodies were changing, rapidly. Fogstow never stood a chance. Like any good mother, the river would not give birth without a nipple to feed her young.
