For decades now we have been searching for the authentic literary voice of post-industrial South Wales, where fly-by-night factories have replaced the mines and their steelworks, television and pop music have swept away chapel religion and the chosen drugs of recreation are heroin and cocaine. Now the publication of a collection of short stories confirms the arrival of a major new literary talent which has grown organically out of the unpromising Valleys. Fresh Apples is Rachel Trezises eagerly-awaited second book, a collection of 11 short stories.
