

Rampaging Hulk #6 (Marvel Magazine) 1977 Sub-Mariner

THE RAMPAGING HULK was a black-and-white comic magazine Marvel produced with the intent that the stories presented within would bridge the gap between the sixth and final issue the the Hulks first series, and his later serial in TALES TO ASTONISH. However, so many inconsistencies were apparent in the stories that they were later written off as a fictional entertainment produced by the alien Bereet. With issue #10, the magazine was re-titled, HULK!, and presented color tales somewhat closer in scope to the then-popular Incredible Hulk TV series. Continues into Hulk! #10
