

The Ebola Wall

The Ebola Wall is a short novel by best-selling author Joe Nobody. In the story, Ebola has mutated into a vicious, easily transmitted variant. The first outbreak occurs in Houston, Texas. The healthcare system is quickly overwhelmed, the number of dead skyrocketing. To protect the human race, the entire metropolis is quarantined, a wall of military armor surrounding the city to contain the virus. The isolated residents find themselves immersed in two desperate struggles; defeating the new strain of a mass killer, and surviving each other. The Ebola Wall takes the reader on a wild ride of unintended consequences and global events. Fueled by the real possibility of an extinction event, harsh measures are implemented to protect mankind. The ramifications will change the world forever. Decisions on both sides of the wall are exploited by basic human emotions. Fear, revenge, and an undeniable desire for freedom are in play. The future of the species depends on the outcome.
