

Wild Ponies: Letters from China (The China Studio Book 2)

Charlotte was born and raised in Guiyang, a remote and beautiful city in the mountains of south western China. After working in China for a few years, she decides to go overseas, in pursuit of a new life. While undertaking a masters degree in Melbourne, Australia, she meets John, an American MBA student. After graduation, she marries him and goes to live in San Diego, USA, where she has two children. In 2012, Charlotte takes a position as a research assistant in a project led by China scholar Rupert Robinson and his assistant Xiaorong, her childhood friend. She travels with Aldo, an Italian professor of anthropology who is also part of the project, to various places in China, from Beijing to remnants of The Old Silk Road in Yunnan province, and to the Wild West of Xinjiang. This book contains the letters that she writes from China to Xiaorong. Charlotte is astonished and amazed by New China, her motherland, familiar and yet strange, contemporary and yet traditional, exciting and sometimes shocking. She begins to see China through other eyes from the perspective of Aldo, a foreign scholar and lover of Chinese culture. She has a fine dining experience in a French restaurant overlooking the Forbidden City, discovers a dragon fossil in a Miao ethnic minority village and drinks Qingdao beer chilled in a snowy mountain creek in Yunnan. She also has to buy blood from illegal Beijing blood gangsters, is confronted by the spectacle of a home-style slaughterhouse in a Kazakh county in Xinjiang Province and experiences a wild night in a Tuvan village with Taklamakan desert motorcyclists. The fate of modern Chinese women, inside and outside China, including stories of her childhood friend Tingting, now a kept woman, and girlfriend Aida, who dies in childbirth in Germany, weigh on her mind. Charlotte comes both to question and appreciate her own roots. In her own backyard, she finds herself challenged and sometimes lost in a search for her own identity. She feels like a drifting leaf that has fallen too far from the parent tree, that she does not really belong anywhere any more, not in San Diego, not in New China and not in the traditional homeland of her ancestors but she may be in the process of finding a third place in which she can be her new self.
