

Passing Strange (The C. D. Sloan Mysteries)

In this gripping mystery by CWA Diamond Dagger winner Catherine Aird, the village spinster dies behind a fortune tellers booth, and Calleshires greatest detective looks into the future and sees justice. The annual Horticultural Society Flower Show would have gone off without a hitch were it not for one very pesky murder. When nurse Joyce Cooper goes missing from the parishs fortune-telling booth at the flower fair, her friends at the local church are immediately concerned. Its not like this old lady, who plays the organ during service every Sunday without fail, and who, its told, lives for the purpose of helping others, to disappear without notice. So when shes found strangled to death under a tarp, the community is thrown into an uproar. Who better to calm the crowd than Calleshires greatest detective? Alongside his bumbling sidekick, Constable Crosby, C. D. Sloan runs through the bizarre list of suspects: the daughter of a deceased anthropologist, a greedy developer, a jealous tomato gardener, and a set of wealthy farmersto find out who would have benefited most from the beloved nurses death. What he finds will astonish the entire village.
