

Sundown Western Tales

Do you love stories about the untamed days of the Old West? Well, pardner, this is one collection of short tales you will not want to pass up! From old standards like Max Brand and Zane Grey to new authors and those in between, you're sure to find these stories to your liking. Settle back in your easy chair and get ready for ten fantastic tales of action and adventure that will pull you right in and have you reaching for your own pistol as you read!

In Zane Grey's story, The Horses of Bostils Ford, a man's horse means everything. Richard Prosch's Storm Damage is the tale of a man finally getting the woman he always wanted. There's nothing better than a dog in Big Jim Williams's Riding Fencewhere a loyal canine friend saves a ranch hand's life in a blizzard. They say there's a fortune to be made in picking up Buffalo Bones. Charlie Steel's character, Smiley, will keep you guessing. The young son of a gallows-builder places a bet with a school chum that a hard-to-hang prisoner will meet his fate, at last, in Kyle Rudek's The Man Who Wouldn't Hang. In Loves Lonesome Serenade The River Romance, Lane Pierce pens a tale of escape and unexpected romance between a young gunman and a soiled dove. W.M. Shockley's Mordecai is a man determined to hold on to what's his to the very end even if he's not sure he wants it. A young man is killed, and a beautiful horse is accidentally shot, changing the course of several lives in Robert Steele's The Good Shooting. The Hicks brothers stir up trouble with the wrong drifter in Gordon L. Rottman's story, Missing But Not Missed. The Cure of Silver Canyon is a wonderful Max Brand western short that blends plenty of drama, action, and emotion into an exciting read.
