

A collection of racy, short stories based in the palm fringed state of Kerala, a state in India. The state is known for, among other things, of being one of the earliest states where Christianity was spread to, and today is an amalgam of various religion and cultures. Stories in this book range from descriptions of British planters in India , the non resident Indian who has come back to his home after working for years in the middle east, to the average man on the street like the postman, the policeman, the doctor and the driver. Kerala being a unique state in that it has 100% literacy provides an interesting background to the various stories that unfold and holds you spell bound. The book also touches on the super natural which holds a unique place in the states folklore!!
