

This Thug Put a Move On My Heart

Could you handle the pressure and lifestyle that come with a thug? What would you do if a thug put a move on your heart? Could you be his rider or would it be too much to handle? Eternity is just a lonely girl trying to find a place in this cold world. After the death of the only person that ever loved her, she is forced to move from her comfort zone to the dangerous streets of Chicago and start her life over with her no-good mother Joanna. In doing so she comes face to face with death on her first day walking those evil streets. Can Eternity handle the pain that comes with trying to build a relationship with her mother and trying to survive the streets of Chicago, or will it become too much for her and cause her to do the unthinkable? JaQwan, known to the streets as Qwan, took the streets of Chicago over after his fathers death. Forced to run the streets where his father left off, Qwan doesnt have time to play Mr. Nice Guy, especially since he knows enemies are watching his every move, waiting for him to slip so they can find his weak spot and place him in the dirt next to his father. But Qwan isnt going out without a fight. When good girl Eternity first meets ruthless thug Qwan, guns are blazing, bullets are flying, and death comes to take a soul away. Still Qwan is amaze with her and stops at nothing to prove that he isnt this heartless thug she first saw him as. Over time Eternity lets Qwan into her heart, but can she handle what comes with loving this thug? Will Qwan change his thuggish ways for Eternity or will he continue to be that heartless thug she first met?
