

Butterfly Woman and Other Tales

A bit of magical realism, a taste or two of natural realism, even a bit of fantastic hilarity. Author Michael Robertson presents a sampler of short stories ranging from two to ten pages in length, a short 95 pages in all. The perfect length for a mornings read after breakfast, or an afternoons relaxation on the deck or beach of your choice. Butterfly Woman, the title story, gives us a glimpse of a woman who turns kisses into insects. Or spend a few moments with a woman in Hawaii who longs for her youth as a surfer beyond the beaches of Waimea. An artist who loses words and gains world fame. A shocking moment in the life of the president of a small coastal country. We enter the minds of a drug dealer with a big heart, a former aid to a powerful Russian bureaucrat, a boy hiding in the winter woods of the Ozark hills, and a young man who has lost his past but discovers his future. And more. This little book presents a medley of portraits of real human beings in defining moments. Whatever your taste in fiction, this little book will whet your appetite and tease your imagination.
